Commentary: In most, if not all, states, action by either chamber of the state legislature (House or Senate) is sufficient to pass a resolution such as the parent panel resolution.*

Parents' lack of access or knowledge how to access treatment results in the needless deaths of countless young people. A state panel of parents of youths who have struggled with the disease of alcohol or other drug addiction, such as envisioned in this model resolution, is a powerful tool for identifying the changes necessary to ensure that all parents who need to will be able to access clinically appropriate alcohol and other drug treatment for addicted children in the family. This relatively modest investment of time and resources will prevent untold suffering and the unnecessary loss of life.
